The only other occupants of the house were the three McDowell children. Early in the morning one of the children awakened night, was out. Slipping quietly ovt of bed Mrs. McDowell went into an adjoining room, in the dark, took a key from the wall, unlocked the desk and secured the Judge's blg pistol. Returning to the bed room she opene a window and let in a faint light. She then saw the shadowy form of a ma and fired at it. Instead of the man it was his reflection in a big mlrror that she hit. She heard the falling glass and, realizing her mistake, she turne the pistol in the direction of a sound and put three bullets into a door. ANNOUNCEMENT.

TO THE CITIZENS OF GARRARD COUNTY:

At the practically unanimous demand of my own party and urgent solicitation of other friends, I have at last consented to become a candidate for the office of County Attorney on the Republican ticket.

I had not expected to again ask for the suffrage of my fellow-citizens, but in view of the great number of electors, regardless of their party affiliation, who have seen proper to insist on my nomination, I have, with some reiuctance, consented to accede to their request.

In thus again asking the citizens of my county for their support for this, one of the most important offices in the gift of ist people, I am not unmindful of ly Sundays it would prevent this ail- the fact that it is an office fraught with the gravest responsibilities and duties, it having not only an important influence on the maintainance of peace and good order throughout the county, but is also perhaps, the most important factor in shaping and controlling the amount of taxes that your Fiscal Court finds it necessary to levy on your property each year to meet the current expenses of your county affairs.

And in this connection, I hope I may be pardoned for referring with ome pride to my former administration of this important duty during the term I had the honor to occupy the office, and when, after my repeated assaults on all useless extravagance, and on certain most time honored leaks in Danville News:-Rev. John Bruce four county treasury, the levy necessary to meet ail the current expenses of your county, and then leave a handsome surplus in your treasury at the close of the year, was less than one-third, barely more than one-fourth, of the amount of each and every successive levy for county purposes made since my retirement from that position. And since the late decision of the Court of Appeals that the Court of the city of Lancaster no longer has jurisdiction to try whisky cases, and with blind tigers not only flourishing throughout the county but, with their Government Licenses all over the corporate limits of Lancaster, actually boasting of their dispensing to your sons, each and every week, three barrels of whisky and over two thousand bottles of beer, with the county attorney being hereafter practically the only safeguard to prevent their extending their sphere, and running even wider open than now,-this office is of even greater importance than ever before to such of our parents as wish to protect their boys from this most vicious and destructive influence, and it well behooves them to make no mistake in selecting and deciding who shall hereafter say whether this condition of things shall continue to exist. With a high conception of the duties of this office, with a higher conception of my obligation to my own and my neighbor's sons, having steadtastly during the twenty-two years of my law practice refused to defend the keeper of a blind tiger, nor in the thirty-nine years of my existence taken a drink of whisky, if honored again by your election to this high trust, I pledge you, that whatever of experience, ability or talent I may possess, shall be exerted to so administer its important duties as to not only encourage and promote peace and good order and a strict obedience to the law throughout the county, but also to prevent any and all illegitimate, improper and unnecessary drains and expenses on your county treasury.

Fearing that pressing business engagements, and the limited time left for my canvass may prevent my seeing each of you personally, I take this method of announcing my candidacy and assuring you that if my candidacy meets with one would get a little cold and mould your approval, I shall be very grateful for whatever assistance you may ren-Respectfully, der toward promoting my election.

W. McC. JOHNSTON.

JAMES B. MCCREARY.

Cynthiana Times:-The career of this distinguished and favorite leader of the Kentucky democracy is one long and useful service, both state and national. In a nut shell, it may be briefly summarized as follows:

Born and reared on a farm in Madison county, his earlier education received in the neighborhood schools and Richmond Seminary; graduated with honors at Centre College, and afterward from the law department of Cumberland University, Tennessee. Entered upon the practice of law at the age of 21 at Richmond, and has been an active and sucsessful member of the bar ever since, except during such periods as his official duties—civ-izing and carrying the state for Bryan il and military-have taken him from home. nomination, he resumed the practice of law at Richmond.

In 1884 he was first elected to congress from the eighth district, and was re-elected for five successive terms, serving in all twelve years with distinguished ability. He served on the leading committees and was twice chairman of the committee on foreign affairs. Many of the leading bills and most important measures before congress during his service in the house originated with Congressman McCreary. Space will not permit of their mention here—they are too many and varied for the attempt.

ABUNDANCE OF FORAGE.

chard Grass Yields It Year After Year and Requires Hardly Any Attention.

Can anyone tell why orchard grass, one of the most common as well as one of the most valuable forage plants in the United States, is not better known and more appreciated? Many a farmer does not even recognize it at sight, though he has had chance to obing itself to all soils and conditions, it flourishes in wet or dry weather, sun or shade, and in a porous subsoil will send its roots to a great depth. This perhaps accounts for its persistence. When once it has secured a foothold it may be relied upon to yield an alumdance of forage year after year with no attention except that it thrives best under crapping. In the spring it is fit for pasturage consider ably earlier than other grasses, and five days' growth will give a good bite. quently sown together by farmers who have learned the value of the combination. A Kentucky stock grower who relies upon it for his pastures once said relative to its capacity for sustaining itself when other grasses are dried up: "It will make more growth in one summer day than blue grass will make in a week." Such a commendation from the land of the famous blue grass pastures is surely a great tribute to its good qualities.

A farmer in northern Ohio has written enthusiastically of a piece of orchard grass on his own farm which seeded itself 26 years ago and which has been cut annually every June since. This season it stood higher than any rye in the vicinity and was so heavy that it lodged. For early sailing and ang pasturage he considers it superior to any other grass, but he utters a cantion about entting it as soon as

Like other drought resisting grasses it shows a disposition to grow in tussocks, but this may be prevented by limshels of seed to the acre are usually considered sufficient, or half that amaint when sown with clover. It is said to be much less exhausting to the soil than timothy, which is so often grown with clover. It was introduced into England from Virginia in 1764, and is there so highly esteemed that it has taken rank as one of the most valuable forage plants produced in the "light little island." The lux-uriance of its aftermath makes it especially fine for pastures, and stock of ill kinds relish it. Sheep, it is said, will leave all other grasses to feed upon it .- Farmer's Review.

"Fly nets for horses in harness are old as the hills," said a dealer in horse equipments, reports the New fork Sun. "but saddle fly nets, for addle horses, are something comparatively new. They are made to fit around the cantle of the saddle, rom which they extend back over the horse's haunches. The net is made of leather cords, commonly in russet, ometimes in black, attached across n parallel lines to five bars or tapes unning lengthwise of the horse's back, the free ends of the cords hangng in the usual manner at the horse's

"As to appearance such a net, seen n a saddle horse, is not only entirely sightly and appropriate there, but it gives to the horse's outfit a touch of picturesqueness.

"Another comparatively new thing or a rider's use is the fly riding whip which has, attached to a handle of about the same length, a hair switch about 18 inches in length. This is something not intended for park use, for which the saddle fly net is entirely suitable, but rather for use in witching the flies off a horse while riding along on the highways and the byways; perhaps on a short-tailed horse, or, it might be, in a region where flies were particularly bother

A PAIR OF LUNATICS.

BY CLAUDE BRYAN,

In Quebee everyone spends the summe evening on Dufferin terrace, where the view is one of the firest in the world. Three handred feet below the promenade the ma-jestic St. Lawrence sweeps out through the sight, though he has nad chance to observe it all his life. A veritable gypsy, it has found a home in every country of Europe and America, in northern Europe and America, in northern marked by the twinkling lights of the Cote work of the country of the sky. The intervening distance is marked by the twinkling lights of the Cote work of the country of the sky. The intervening distance is marked by the twinkling lights of the Cote work of the country of the sky. The intervening distance is marked by the twinkling lights of the Cote work of the country of the country of the sky. The intervening distance is marked by the twinkling lights of the Cote work of the country of the c de Beanpre, a graceful upland hemmed in by the Laurentides. The tonte ensemble is magnificent by day, but indescribably bean-tiful at night.

I was a stranger in Quebec, having just arrived the day before by the steamer from England. After dinner I strolled ont upon the terrace to finish my cigar. Some 300 paces brought me to the south end, where the terrace to finish my cigar. Some 300 paces brought me to the sonth end, where the stairway rms up the glacis to the king's bastion. Here I pansed to contemplate the panorama that spread ont heneath me. At the base of Cape Diamond, in middle stream, were moored H. M. S. Crescent and four consorts. A sailors' ehorns blew up on the breeze. A mile away, across the river, the stream was rapid; $\frac{1}{2}$ $\frac{1}{2} Its blossoming season is the same as the breeze. A mile away, across the river, that of red clover, and they are freon the surrounding hills the convent lamps, in their sable background, made huge pyro technics. A moment later the regimental band in the terrace pavilion struck up an inspiring march. A sentimental flood swept over me, and my spirit wandered in a northern Eden. Almost comatose with pleasure, I stood thus silently for several minutes. Then, a rasping rasping broke my spell.

"Say, wouldn't this jar you! To hear an eighteenth century band tooting 'Rule Britannia.' I'll bet a cent they haven't even heard of rag-time up here in Quebec and we've had it in Brooklyn for dear knows how long."

I smiled, though the face, the voice, the whine, the everything, annoyed me. "You see," continued the eadavre, bearing hard upon his nasal notes, "I got a little holiday from business the other day, and I thought I'd take a janut up here to Quebec. But, s'help me, if it ain't the slowest place I've ever been in. Why, there ain't a blessed thing going on. With that preface to feign insanity was easy.

I leaned across and looked at him with the whites of my eyes. "Yom's is a sad, sad story," I whispered, dramatically. "Do you mean to tell me that you are really George Washington, and that they won't even rent you a room in the white honse?" "Who said anything about the white honse, you daffy," he exclaimed; but I observed that his bravado hardly concealed the tremor in his voice. "Datfy," I whispered, hoarsely, and with growing vehemence. "I never let anyone call me Daffy. Once a boy at school called me daffy, and I ent him up so badly that they clipped my wings and put a chain around my neck."

The fellow started; for while I had the brawn of a guardsman, Sweet Caporal had taken a cubit from his stature. "But some way, I sort of like you." (Here I took a savage grin upon his arm.)

"What do you say to a stroll down to the Cul-de-sae?" No answer. But I felt him shake all over at the prospect of a lonely walk with a crazy man. We shuffled along the terrace, I wellnigh supporting his nerveless body

When we had reached the chateau end o the terrace, I felt him trying to slip my grasp. I purposely relaxed it. A moment later a policeman hove in sight, and wrenching himself free, my companion bolted. I hacked up against the railing and watched them; but to couceal amusement required my best effect. required my best effort.

Then I saw the officer coming toward me gingerly, and my late companion skulking in his rear. But I was not yet willing to end the farce.

"See here," I said, when the policem had reached me. "You have just been talking to a lunatic. The poor fellow fancies everyone is erazy and seeking to kill him. I am his guardian, and he has been giving me a good deal of trouble this evening. He is of a good New York family, and his phy sician sent him to Quebec for a change of air. The policeman gave me his most knowing wink; and looked sadly across at my de mented companion, whose discretion had kept him just beyond our voices. Then heaving a sigh of officions sympathy the officer continued his beat.

I quickly lost myself in the crowd, and soon sought my room. Next morning I heard that a young man on the promenade had been rather roughly handled, and was now locked safely in No. 61, awaiting an examination as to the con-dition of his mind. The keen-eyed policeman had come once more upon my victim, and, supposing that he had evaded his chaperon, had taken him in charge.

I myself left Quebec by the next train the mental examination still pending; and although I never heard more of my ef fusive friend, I fancy he had some difficulty in establishing his serity.—Canadian Maga

DOG AND PARROT CASE. Wo Novel Parisian Libel Suits Grow ing Out of Actions of Pet

Two worthy wives mutually sued each other for what they called libel before the correctional chamber. Plaintiff No. 1, being asked to state her ease, said it all came about owing to a parrot, says a Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph. The bird had a vicious disposition, and its mistress (the defendant) egged it on to be even worse than it was by nature.
